*Pre-Medicine Concurrent Sessions:

“The Do’s and Don’t of Medical School Admission (Room W200)
Description: The time is near; we must now begin to prepare to apply for admission into medical school. This session will provided a checklist of the “do’s and don’ts” every aspiring medical doctor must be aware of before completing a medical school application.

“Preparing for the MCAT” (Room 501)
Description: The MCAT Exam is an admission’s requirement for medical school, which assess problem-solving skills, critical thinking skills, writing skills and knowledge of prerequisite medical science concepts. The format of this four component test, along with preparation strategies and review material, will be discussed during the length of this session

“Making Yourself a Competitive Applicant: A Panel Discussion” (Room W501)
Description: Each one of us has at least one burning question that must be answered before we can decided exactly what we are going to do after graduation. From undergraduate courses to research experience, our panel of medicine-related participants will address all questions asked during this session, and will speak candidly about what makes a student stand out as a candidate for admission into medical school.
